Rangers FC Recruitment Plan Summer 2024

By Patrick Caskie | @patrickcaskie

Approach and Methods

This analysis consists of what I would do should I become a judge, jury, and executioner for the Rangers this summer. As an outsider, I am not privy to anything that goes on behind the scenes. Given this, 100% realism is an impossible goal, and the primary aim of this piece is not that in any case.

The following analysis primarily focuses on the 2023/24 season; however, it is not confined and will extend as far back as deemed appropriate if necessary. External factors such as contract and transfer dynamics will help formulate subsequent decisions alongside performance criteria.I have not limited myself to dealing only in markets that Rangers have historically done so in, as that has proven a glass ceiling. All suggestions are, in my opinion, realistic in a financial and playing sense.

The ELO system, inspired by chess, is prominent in this analysis and attempts to quantify team quality amongst most of Europe's top-flight divisions. Using this allows me to add granularity to analysis and filter my data analysis to be more focused and relevant, as comparing Rangers and their players to their peers at similar outliers like Fenerbahce/Man City/Crvena Zvezda is more productive.

This is most prominent on various radar charts comparing prospective targets and historical or current Rangers players. At times, the radar and the accompanying captions conflict. This is because, where appropriate, the two radars will come from separate data sets, with the Rangers player's data produced from an ELO-filtered set compared against similar teams. In contrast, the other player will have no filter. This is an attempt to level the playing field as Rangers players naturally have stronger data output given the team they play for, masking quality and style compared to those in average teams.

This work is in no way affiliated with any organisation and is the work of Patrick Caskie in its entirety, unless specified. Any and all feedback is appreciated.

Goalkeeper Review

- Jack Butland swiftly dispelled any concerns of a repeat of last season's goalkeeping struggles, and in the process emerged as a fan-favourite. Despite this, the sum of his contributions were overrated largely down to the troubles of last year. Nonetheless, whilst his performance in the Premiership was slightly above average, he did step up a level in the Europa League, however not to levels unseen by previous Rangers GKs in the same competition. It's crucial to consider whether his level of competence is enough to deter potential transfer bids, especially whilst he's at his peak value and reportedly earning a substantial wage that could be allocated more effectively within the squad and situation where GKs are off relatively little value compared to other positions.

- Robby McCrorie likely expected to play more than the 90 minutes he got this season; however, given Butland's ever-presence, he has sat on the bench all season, the dominant theme of his career. I would try to convince him to continue doing so as our no.2, given his club and association-trained value

- Jon McLaughlin's tenure at Rangers ended on a subdued note. While he initially made a strong start and proved to be a reliable substitute for a series of no.1s, his appearances have been sparse since a particularly nightmarish performance against Celtic almost two years ago.

- Kieran Wright may play for the Rangers one day, but I don't know his level. Ideally, we don't need to, and he continues to be paid to be a training keeper and a fixture on the bench.

Verdict

- Sell Butland for anything over £5m and take as little of those funds as possible to replace him with a dependable replacement. Keep McCrorie as no.2 with the chance of more minutes given the flux ahead of him; however, if he demands to leave, replace him with the cheapest slightly competent Scottish GK. With McLaughlin leaving, Kieran Wright takes his place as 3rd choice; there is no need for an actual replacement.

Fullback Review

- James Tavernier remains an unparalleled threat with the ball at his feet, and specific tactical tweaks have allowed him to stay so despite father time starting to take its toll. Defensively, he remains a question mark, especially against matchups where he is physically outmatched. He would remain a net positive should he stay; however, given that we are at the precipice of his value curve, it would be best to accept any reasonable offers that arrive.

- Ridvan Yilmaz's performance on the field has been impressive, but his ability to maintain this level of play over extended periods is a concern. His playing style aligns well with Clement's strategy for fullbacks, but his skills are not unique, and he holds value for Turkish teams. Therefore, a straightforward sale with a modest profit should not be a complex process.

- Borna Barisic's tenure ends on a subdued note compared to the highs he achieved at the beginning of the 20s. His crossing is elite, but the rest of his game fails to compare, and a switch in the game model means that this role is not valued over all else.

- Dujon Sterling is not a starting RB as we advance for me, regardless of whether Tavernier stays or leaves. I see him better placed in the centre of midfield. However, his utility and versatility are outstanding and will see him operate as a rotation option in several positions, RB included.

Verdict

The situation at fullback is predicated on whether there is interest or intent to get a move on Yilmaz or Tavernier. With Jefte's arrival, Barisic's role has been replaced; however, I would go further, bring in another LB, and look to move Yilmaz on. Similarly, I would look to sell Tavernier and bring in a new starting RB; however, it's not much of a fuss if it is impossible. Sterling should provide great backup on both sides, whilst Devine further ensures the right side.

Centreback Review

- Connor Goldson's streak of ever-presence snapped towards the end of the season. He's had his poorest season at the club since he arrived and, like others, is at the precipice of his value curve. There is an argument that the rest afforded from that injury and summer could rejuvenate him. However, I would attempt to offload his contract and get a fee whilst we still can.

- John Souttar has managed to avoid the injury bug for a full season, which is basically a first for him. His in-possession skills are invaluable, as is his homegrown UEFA status. He's defensively shaky at times; however, even with this factored in, he remains a good starter/rotation option at CB who can fill in on both sides.

- Leon Balogun's contract has been extended until the summer of 2025, and there is evidence that this has been merited. He's the most proficient defender at the club, a capable ball carrier, and an aerial threat. I would not have done so, as the need for a refresh outweighs any perceived stability; however, he remains a good option from the bench.

- Ben Davies has barely been seen this season for many reasons, most prominently injuries. His relative frailty and lack of intensity make him an easy target for Scotland's brutish no.9s. He still has two seasons left on his contract but should not see them out. Getting him off the books and recouping some portion of what we spent is imperative.

- Leon King appears to be at a crossroads in his development. His physical profile has led to him being re-cast as a no.6; regardless, he should remain an emergency backup at CB.

Verdict

Sell Goldson and Davies whilst being prepared to accept less than expected, as the need for wage relief is imperative and new blood is badly needed. Souttar remains one of 3 starter-ish CBs accompanied by a new LCB and RCB, whilst Balogun and King remain as cover.

no.6 Review

- John Lundstram leaves after a spell with incredible highlights; however, he ultimately flattered to deceive. He's not a poor footballer per se, but rather, his skills are misaligned with what is needed as a no.6 for Rangers. Removing his massive wage is a positive

- Nicolas Raskin's season was rather stop-start due to a series of injuries; however, once he got going, he looked promising and like the player who joined in January 2023. There are obvious concerns over his size, but despite this, he remains a dependable rotation/starter option, best suited to domestic play and as a second 6 in UEFA games.

- Dujon Sterling has emerged as a valuable no.6, a position that suits his energy, agility, and tactical intelligence, which makes him our best no.6 when we're out of possession. However, his limited in-possession game means that relying too heavily on him would be unwise and he should remain a prominent rotation option with the expectation of starting in UEFA games.

- Jose Cifuentes disappointed after a fantastic time in the MLS. He's more of an 8 but was predominantly used as a 6; however, his loan in Brazil still has six months to run, with the buy option hopefully exercised.

Verdict

Raskin and Sterling remain prominent options in the rotation with confidence in their ability to start. Nonetheless, we need to sign an undisputed starter who is more suited to the demands of a high-possession playmaker to replace the outgoing Lundstram. King and Rice should form our backup.

no.8 Review

- Since his arrival from Nordsjaelland, Mohamed Diomande has shown promise to spark optimism around his fit and future. The past six months have served as an acclimatisation period more than anything else, during which he has demonstrated enough potential to secure a rotation/starting spot in the future. However, valid concerns must be managed, particularly regarding his size and consistency.

- For the second season in a row, Tom Lawrence's has been curtailed by injuries, albeit he featured more prominently this year than last. He has some apparent qualities that are better suited to other sides but these do not override the technical and external question marks, moving him on should be prioritised.

- Nicolas Raskin's future role should be primarily as a no.6, but he also has the versatility to fill the no.8 position when we adopt a more conservative approach.

- Kieran Dowell has barely featured this season due to injuries. While he's been on the pitch, there have been sparks, but ultimately, not enough. He is among many on the precipice of his value curve and on a large wage, so moving him on should be prioritised.

- Jose Cifuentes is more of a no.8 but was seldom afforded much time in the role. However, his future seems sorted with his loan to Brazil with an option to buy.

Verdict

Diomande should be pencilled in as a starter, although not a nailed-on option for every game, whereas Raskin should provide good cover and feature prominently in this role when facing better opposition. A rotation option who can also fill in further forward is required, whilst Sterling and McKinnon can offer backup.

no.10 Review

- Todd Cantwell has had a decent time at Rangers, albeit marred by volatility on and off the pitch. There are certain weeks or months when he looks like a perfect no.10 to build around, but there are also times when the opposite is true. Like others, this summer is one of a few junctures to cash in on his depreciating value, which should be done.

- For the second season in a row, Tom Lawrence's has been curtailed by injuries, albeit he featured more prominently this year than last. He has some apparent qualities that are better suited to other sides but these do not override the technical and external question marks, moving him on should be prioritised.

- Kieran Dowell has barely featured this season due to injuries. While he's been on the pitch, there have been sparks, but ultimately, not enough. He is among many on the precipice of his value curve and on a large wage, so moving him on should be prioritised.

- Sam Lammers failed to instil much confidence while playing for Rangers; however, the same cannot be said for his loan spell at Utrecht, who have been mesmerised by his abilities as no.9. Regardless of his supreme form in his homeland, he does not have a future at Rangers. He should be sold while interest in the Netherlands is peaking.

Verdict

All four should be moved on if possible as they all remain just about sellable assets. Cantwell is the sole option who should remain if no party is willing to come to the table and negotiate seriously; whilst the others should be sold at almost any price, with Lammers asking price being the highest. With this considered, the entire rotation will need refreshing, with a new starter, rotation option, and a previously mentioned no.8 who can fill in at 10 required. Diomande and Lowry should provide backup.

Winger Review

- Abdallah Sima has proven to be one of few players who has emerged from this season with genuine pass marks although injury issues curtailed his quest for the Golden Boot. With no agreed fee in the loan, it would be up to the clubs to negotiate; however, any potential fee is likely too much to rationalise.

- Ross McCausland played a far more significant role than expected and was fine doing so, which is more than good enough for a young homegrown player in their breakout season. Going forward he should provide a serviceable rotation option. A loan may be mooted but is unlikely due to a lack of depth

- Rabbi Matondo, like many others, struggled with injuries and was marred with inconsistency when fit. The experiment is over as moving him on should be prioritised while we still can for a decent fee.

- Fabio Silva was mediocre at best and a failure of a loan at worst.

- Scott Wright offers value in that he is homegrown for UEFA squads; however, besides that, he is simply not good enough for where the club should be looking. Selling him shouldn't be impossible, albeit any fee is a bonus.

- Oscar Cortes looked bright during his very limited cameos in the second half of the season. Injury frustrated him, but it did not wholly disrupt his schedule, as he could spend time in Scotland acclimatising to his surroundings and peers.

Verdict

Enquire about Sima's availability, albeit the finances make finding value their difficult. Sell Matondo and Wright with the goal of recouping the money spent, albeit not a requirement. Silva should be left to the past, whilst Cortes may should play a significant rotation, whilst McCausland offers a less prominent but stable option. Starters are required on both sides whilst a two-sided rotation and W/CF hybrid would prove helpful

CF Review

- Cyriel Dessers provided a whole season's worth of discourse in single games multiple times. He has undoubted qualities, as it takes a lot of skill to miss all the chances he does, albeit finishing is not one of those skills. Lots has been made about his goals p90 and other metrics vis a vis previous strikers however, it's a tenuous comparison as it's been over a decade since we've had strikers that come close to matching the hit-rate expected of him. However, his relatively good form and data profile mean he could move on for a similar price to what we paid, which should be the aim this summer, albeit keeping him for another season is not the worst idea.

- Danilo, like Dessers, looked good at most things besides putting the ball into the net; however, unlike the Nigerian, his sample size of minutes was small enough to question whether it was just a bad patch of form or genuine deficiency. Given his injury, suitors are unlikely to engage at a reasonable price point, so keeping him and looking towards him as a good rotation/starter option is the next step.

- Kemar Roofe impressed for the most part when he was able to make it on to the pitch, but given his wage and transfer fee, that wasn't often enough.

- Sam Lammers seldom played as a no.9 at Rangers but has done so at Utrecht to significant effect. Flirting with the idea of a Lammers remontada as a CF isn't something I am going to do; instead selling him whilst we can re-coup what we spent is possible and the road to go down.

Verdict

Sell Dessers for as close to the price we paid for him as possible. The same goes for Lammers, albeit with greater discipline regarding the asking price given reported interest in the Netherlands. Keep Danilo and accompany him with another starting level 9 to fight for the shirt and a previously mentioned W/CF hybrid.

Loan Review

- Sam Lammers has been the pick of the bench regarding Rangers loanees. He's returned to the form seen of him years ago when at Heerenveen; however, this is not enough to convince me to keep a hold of him, especially when interest in the Netherlands and a potential transfer exist and are relatively easy to do.

- Ianis Hagi played a limited role for Alaves, but the numbers suggest he imparted significant influence. However, the sample size is small and easily skewed by one good performance. I struggle to see a way back into the fold after several injuries and poor performances. A sale should be prioritised, although should suits not emerge, he is still in the plans.

- Jose Cifuentes has yet to get much of a shot at Cruzeiro; His loan runs longer than others due to the flipped calendars. I expect him to remain there and, if not, sell him upon return, although his outstanding time in America could earn him another chance if suitors do not emerge.

- Alex Lowry returned on loan in January and has struggled with injuries since. His time at Hearts was underwhelming but not pointless, as he played more senior football than at any other point. He should remain as a backup and help bolster UEFA squads.

- Adam Devine rarely featured for Motherwell whilst on loan, and when he did, he appeared to have been fine. He should remain a backup and help with UEFA registration criteria.

- Arron Lyall's contract is up, and he failed to show enough to convince of an extension.

Verdict

Sell Lammers for what we paid for him. Stay disciplined, given that his form will attract suitors around this price range. Sell Hagi for something close to what we paid but prepare to make a loss. Monitor Cifuentes's loan, with the expectation of him playing no further part. Devine and Lowry stay as backups, while Lyall should leave upon the expiration of his contract.

Squad-Wide Deficiencies

- Clement's lack of a unique style in and out of possession thus far allows for the recruitment of more "generalised profiles," which allows the net to be cast wider and prove more sustainable should he be fired.

- Saying this, the single significant distinction seen thus far in his system is how much it predictated on the individual's ability to progress the ball and win their 1v1s; as such. Targeting such players is required

- There is little to no dynamism and pace/power found across the squad, which is a major concern as physical supremacy vis a vis your opponent is the easiest way to mask the technical deficit we experience in Europe and help dominate games domestically in and out of possession.

- Furthermore, greater versatility is needed as a balance is needed between gutting the squad, sustainable transfer spending, and maintaining the ability to cover the 50+ games we will likely play. Specialisation should not be ignored in the process though.

- While the need to compete in the short term is crucial, it's equally important to maintain a balance in transfers that align with a long-term strategy of sustainability and player trading, providing reassurance about the club's financial health.

- The wage structure has grown massively and gotten out of hand as new contracts and poor recruitment have seen poor players paid handsomely. Re-designing the wage structure and shedding it in the process is a must.

- Homegrown players are nice and a sticking point for UEFA squads, but they do not trump all else, even if we are set to lose a few.

Transfer List and Budgets

- Budgets are almost always a topic of contention when you're on the outside looking in; however, they are even more so this season as chatter has arisen, and we will be working with a minimal one this season. Without stating the obvious, it appears sensible to expect that we won't perform a net spend this summer, and should we do so, it will be minuscule at best. This would break with the trends seen since we returned to the Premiership, with the net spending of each season seen below.

2023/24: 126%
2022/23: 54%
2021/22: 25%
2020/21: 1170%
2019/20: 1673%
2018/19: 322%
2017/18: 298%
Average: 130%

- It is important to note that Jefte and Diomande's signings have already been confirmed, and their costs are estimated to be in the range of £4-6m. This has significantly eaten into our already limited budget. On the right, you can see the proposed outgoings and the expected financial return in transfer fees and wage relief. The latter is particularly important, given our history of paying players excessively high wages. Removing these players from our books would provide much-needed financial relief.

Verdict

- It's reasonable to operate on the understanding that the club will need to have an eye for profit, with wage relief a significant factor in this and something that must change going forward. Given this, I will approach the transfers with a figure of around £25m and an appropriate wage ratio should all the outgoings occur. The budget would decrease should players with firm asking prices not leave like Butland, Tavernier or Ridvan, but so would the number of gaps to fill.
